A guru doesn’t need to test you spiritually

A guru can clearly see every bag of karma for what it is – there is no need for a test

Does a guru put a disciple to test?

I don’t know about that but disciples definitely put the guru to test. Where is the time for the guru to put a disciple to test? He is desperately waiting for at least one disciple who will create the necessary opening for the guru to do something truly significant with him.

So, where is the time to test you? And test you for what? You want an A grade, is that why you are asking this question? I don’t have to test you. When I see you through and through, where is the need to test you? Only if I can’t figure out who you are, I have to test you.

I know there is this whole nonsense about God testing you. I think that is where this question comes from. Unfortunately, when you go to your maths exam, you are calling Shiva. That is the wrong guy, he couldn’t be bothered. You don’t take such a guy to the examination hall. He is for a different purpose.

Your guru is for a different purpose. I would appraise you for work on the physical level, but for spiritual purposes there is no need to test. All this testing is irrelevant in the spiritual realm. A guru can clearly see every bag of karma for what it is. There is no need to be tested.
