Coimbatore: The Isha Yoga Foundation will soon start a centre for leadership training in the region.

Announcing this at a leadership workshop held at the Isha Yoga Centre here on Saturday, its founder Sadhguru Jaggi Vasudev said the society is in search of good leaders in various aspects of life.

“However, it is rare to find one,” he said stressing the importance of grooming good leaders.

Calling upon the need to embrace spirituality, which would add power to one’s personality, he said, “There will be many obstacles in one’s life, both in personal and professional. However, one should not deter himself from discharging his duties owing to such problems. Discharging duties is an important factor of one’s life.”

He also stressed the importance of having a good character.

“While striving to become a good leader, one should evolve into a good character too,” said Sadhguru.

As many as 189 senior executives and business owners from different parts of the country are taking part in the four-day programme. Ram Charan, coach and mentor to CEOs of Fortune 500 companies also took sessions in the programme, which will come to a close on Sunday.

According to Ram Charan, “In my fifty years of global experience, I have never come across such a huge platform where you have so many CEOs as resource advisors.”

Participant organisations include Nokia, Tata Power, L&T, Godrej, Bajaj, IBM India, Onida, Mumbai Airport, Apollo Hospitals etc among various other companies across the country.
