Isha Home School released Homegrown Tales, a compendium of short stories, written by students of the school. The first copy of the book was presented to Sadhguru Jaggi Vasudev by one of the young authors.

The book is a collaboration of Isha Home School and Quill Club Writers. The short stories have been written by 28 students and are meant for people of all ages. The stories span different genres and settings.

The event was marked by an eclectic musical performance and a spell binding skit by students. Isha Home School, founded by Sadhguru in 2005, is a residential school located on the outskirts of Coimbatore where children are provided the environment to nurture and blossom.

The book has 28 stories and the students worked with their English teachers and Quill Club editors and mentors Hemant Kumar and Ruchira Mittal.

The process of writing took nearly four weeks spread over six months and the budding writers learned the art of how to conceive and tell a story.

The project also brought forth the ability in the students to work as a group and be open to criticism of their private thoughts and ideas.

The book will be available in leading bookstores and on Flipkart.
