Sadhguru Jaggi Vasudev of Isha Yoga Centre has urged all to take a vow to save water and soil of the nation for posterity.

“Our farmer's life has been made more difficult. On this day, it is time for all to take a commitment to protect the rivers to save water and soil,” he said in his Independence Day message, which was read out at the Isha Yoga Centre on Tuesday.

“In the last 70 years, businesses and industry have grown; scientists have made remarkable achievements on the land and in the space. And above all the life expectancy of an average Indian has gone up phenomenally. But of all these things, the most significant achievement is that of the poor farmer with very minimal infrastructure, managing to provide food for over a billion people out of sheer traditional knowledge,” he said.

Director of Farmers & Producers Organisation Kittusamy hoisted the national flag at Isha Yoga Centre as part of Independence Day celebrations. Public, children from nearby tribal villages and tourists participated in the celebrations.
